The Secretary says that nothing significant has changed from the budget except an additional £300 charge for a missing flamingo head. He says the accounts show a contribution of £5333.29.

The President is shocked that a flamingo head would cost £300.

The Bursar says that the flamingo head was picked up this morning and so the extra £300 charge has been wiped off.

The Secretary deletes the £300 charge from the accounts.

The Secretary moves that TSC ratify the MT18 ball accounts showing a contribution of £5633.29, pending the approval of TFC

The President-Elect says that he sent out the access survey late last week and has received 618 responses. He says he will send round a detailed breakdown of results and that these are largely pretty positive. He says people are largely happy with all services provided by the Union.

The Librarian-Elect asks what information was received about the bar.

The President-Elect says that the bar was rated as '7' as a service, and people were just about in favour of allowing laptops in the bar. He says other polls about rules changes and minutes going online were much clearer.

The Librarian-Elect asks if there is any information about the sort of people that responded.

The President-Elect says that responses were 60% undergraduate, 30% postgraduate and 10% alumni. He says that responses to the disabilities and socioeconomic questions were concerning.

Ms. Joshi asks when the results will be distributed.

The President says that the raw results should not be published.

The Bursar says this will be discussed afterwards.

The Secretary asks about the access-specific questions.

The President-Elect says that socioeconomic and disabilities problems were clearest, as each area of access had 3 questions asked.

The Secretary asks what these 3 questions were.

The President-Elect says that the 3 questions were: 1) How someone identifying in that category feels the Union does for them, 2) Whether the Union can do better, 3) What measures they think the Union should implement.

The Librarian-Elect asks whether everyone was asked how they feel as each area of access.

The President-Elect says that they were not.
